William Doyle House

Montgomery Co., MD

C. Mazurek

Feb 1997

Section 7.1

The William Doyle house is abandoned and in a severely deteriorated condition. The loss of the roof has led to the collapse and rot of the interior wood framing, leaving only a shell of a structure. The distinct stages of construction are still evident, even though the building is a ruin. The original log framing is noticeable underneath the German siding, as are the later wood frame additions. The entire house has a stone foundation, with the exception of a concrete porch on the south elevation. A two-story stone shed and the remains of a mill are located to the east of the house, on the Patuxent river.
